Hi Keith,
Today as part of communication with Federal partners on the Emergency Act, Christine Lamarche and I met with Melanie Vanstone from Transport Canada and reps from the following:
Canadian Trucking Alliance
Private Motor Truck Council
Provincial Towing Association of Ontario
Ontario Recovery Group
CAA

One concern that was raised from the towing industry in Ontario was the fact that police may be getting services of rogue operators to assist in Ottawa.

They spoke about the violence within the industry that may make things more difficult for police and/or government at the end of the day.

They pointed out that they were not consulted and could not assist in the planning to ensure the right operators are identified.

I advised of course that we, the RCMP do not police and that I did not know how the tow trucks were identified that are here in Ottawa. I advised them to deal with the OPP, but that I would send a note through our internal chain for awareness/consideration.

No need to reply

Dennis
